
CONTENTS

Preface.	iii
Tables.	xi
Summary.	xiii
Acknowledgments.	xxvii
Acronyms.	xxix
Chapter One
INTRODUCTION.	1
EU Enlargement	1
NATO Enlargement	4
A Regional Security System	4
Approach and Organization	6
Chapter Two
ATHEORETICAL FRAMEWORK.	9
The Essence of Geopolitics.	9
Europe's New Geopolitics.	12
NATO's Stance Toward Enlargement	14
Russia's Role in the New Geopolitics.	15
Strategic End Games and Military End Games.	18
How Russia Views Enlargement	19
Anti-NATO Stance: Russia's Double Zone of Security	20
The Limits of Enlargement	21
Effective Western Planning Is Needed	22
Summary.	23

Chapter Three

RUSSIA'S NEW FOREIGN POLICY OF STATISM	25
Statism Defined	25
The Strategic Debate in Russia	26
Atlanticism	28
Different Schools	31
The Move to Statism	35
Dealing with Eurasia and the CIS	39
The CIS	40
Eurasia—Belarus	45
Eurasia—Ukraine	45
Eurasia—Central Asia and the Caucasus	49
A New Great Game?	53
Dealing with Europe and Western Enlargement	54
Arms-Control Slowdown	55
Russia and the Retreat from Europe	57
From Neutral Zone to Western Zone?	59
The Russian Response	62
The Composite Picture	67

Chapter Four

THE STAYING POWER OF STATISM	71
Insights from Theory and History	73
Europe's and United States' History	75
Russia's History	77
Conclusions for Staying Power	84
The Interplay of Internal Politics, External Challenges, and Strategic Requirements	86
Presidential-Style System and Statism	86
Domestic Trends	89
External Challenges	90
Strategic Requirements: The Interplay of Domestic Politics and External Setting	93
Statism's Uncertain Character	95
Interests	96
Options for Reintegration	99
Multilateral Military Reintegration	103
Statism's Strategic Responses to Enlargement	104
Summary	107

Chapter Five

RESOURCES FOR STATISM.	109
Russia's Economy.	110
Defense Policy: Getting Smaller While Remaining a Regional Power.	114
Nuclear Forces.	114
Conventional Forces.	116
Maldeployments.	118
Collapse of Readiness.	121
Inadequate Budgets.	121
Lower Manpower Levels.	123
A Triage Philosophy.	123
Chechnya as an Example of Collapse of Readiness.	127
Personnel and Training Shortfalls Are the Most In Need of Remedying.	128
Military Strategy for the Future.	128
Role of Military in Russian Society.	129
November 1993 Military Doctrine.	129
A More Selective, Adaptive Strategy.	133
A Second Revolutionary Departure: Qualitative Rather Than Quantitative Superiority.	135
Force Posture for the Future.	139
A Three-Tiered Structure.	139
Mobile Force.	139
Posture Estimates.	142
Affordability.	144
What the Russian Economy Will Bear.	144
Procurement Requirements.	145
All-Volunteer Force.	147
Summary.	147
Combat Capability.	148
Technology.	148
Skills and Doctrine.	149
Missions.	149
The Composite Picture.	153
Russian Rejuvenation.	153
Russia in Eurasia.	153
East Central Europe and Asia.	156
Western Enlargement and Policy Choices.	157

Chapter Six

RUSSIA AND THE WEST IN THE NEW GEOPOLITICS OF EAST CENTRAL EUROPE.	161
Structural Characteristics.	162
Anarchical Foundations.	162
Diverse Politics and Economics.	163
Imbalance of Military Power.	174
Propensity for Change.	178
Prospects for Stability.	178
Destabilizing Scenarios in the Absence of Western Enlargement.	180
Local Turmoil.	181
Neo-Imperial Russian Domination.	182
Regional Multipolarity.	184
Tripolarity.	186
Summary.	189
Instability in the Presence of Western Enlargement: Four Worrisome Scenarios.	189
Unsuccessful Enlargement in East Central Europe	190
Bipolar Standoff and Bipolar Confrontation.	191
Enlargement as Entanglement.	192
A New Geopolitical Division in Europe.	192
The Composite Picture of the New Geopolitics.	193

Chapter Seven

STRATEGIC END GAMES FOR ENLARGEMENT.	195
Components of a Strategic End Game.	196
The Single-Community Solution.	197
Theory.	197
Institutional Vehicle.	197
Desirability.	198
Feasibility.	198
Barriers to Feasibility.	199
Role of United States and NATO.	201
Summary.	202
Collective Security.	203
Theory.	203
Institutional Vehicle.	203
Desirability.	204
Feasibility.	205
Barriers to Feasibility.	205

Feasibility: The Historical Verdict	206
Summary.	207
The Institutional Web.	209
Theory.	209
Institutional Vehicles.	210
Feasibility.	211
Desirability.	211
The West and Russia.	212
The West and Other Countries.	212
The Other CIS Countries.	213
Summary.	214
Open-Door Enlargement	214
Theory.	214
Institutional Vehicles.	215
Preliminary Evaluation: Desirability and Feasibility	217
Assumption: Baltic States and Ukraine Want NATO Membership.	217
Assumption: Russia Will Acquiesce to Baltic States and Ukraine Joining the West.	218
Core Issues.	220
Summary.	220
The Two-Community Solution.	220
Theory.	221
Basic Assumptions.	221
Priorities.	222
Institutional Vehicles.	222
Economic Relations.	223
Political and Security Relations.	224
Desirability.	225
Feasibility.	225
Summary.	227
Policy Implications.	227
Need to Plan Now.	227
End-Game Trade-Offs.	228
The Russia Factor.	230
Chapter Eight
MILITARY END GAMES FOR ENLARGEMENT.	231
Shaping NATO's New Defense Arrangements in East Central Europe.	233
A Range of Missions Performed Together.	234

Changes Required of New Members.	235
Changes in NATO's Defense Posture.	238
Three Different Military Strategies.	239
Evaluation of Three Strategies.	241
Guiding Force Modernization and Weapon Sales in East
Central Europe.	243
Principal Buyers.	244
Potential Sellers.	247
Competition.	250
Leadership-Dominated End Game: Political Control of
Weapon Sales.	251
Summary.	253
Improving the CFE Arms-Control Regime.	253
The CFE Treaty.	254
New-Era End Game: Deep Cuts.	258
Not Distribution of Arms but Distribution of Power	261
Summary.	261
Toward a Comprehensive Military End Game.	263
Chapter Nine
CONCLUSIONS.	267
Bibliography.	271